

Luisa Kenausis

Program Assistant, Nuclear Weapons

Luisa Kenausis is program assistant for nuclear weapons at the Stanley Center for Peace and Security, where she supports work to avoid the use and limit the spread of nuclear weapons by planning, organizing, and implementing programming at the intersection of nuclear policy and emerging technology.

Before joining the Stanley Center, Kenausis was a Scoville Fellow at the Center for Arms Control and Non-Proliferation.

Kenausis has a BS in nuclear science and engineering and political science from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.
